Our Battle for Survival

November 11 2015, Remembrance Day, was also the 50th Anniversary of the defiant blast that was the Unilateral Declaration of Indepedence (UDI) by the white people of Rhodesia.

Forgotten by the cretinous masses of today Rhodesia was the White Man's Alamo in Africa. A call to duty that some answered with incredible courage but too few. The white people of Rhodesia were just too old fashioned to be of interest to the 'cool' generation of the 'happening' 60s.

In the United States of America a similar scenario was unfolding. With even more more aggressive zionist pressure. The Confederate States who a century before came under fratricidal assault as a result of the efforts of our eternal enemies, were once again assaulted by carpetbaggers and scallawags. Brave, so brave, Rhodesia resisted, as did the Southern States and their supporters.

Neither could withstand the pressure of the Traditional Enemy with the power of their purse and their useful political stooges to command. In the case of Rhodesia this included Socialist Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Conservative Prime Minister and fellow betrayer Margaret Thatcher.

'British' Clampdown on Free Speech Accelerates

By Francis Carr Begbie

This article is reprinted from TheOccidentalObserver.net with their kind permission and originally appeared on their website on October 24 2015

The long anticipated British government Counter-Extremism Strategy document has been unveiled — and it looks to be aimed at unprecedented restrictions on freedom of speech, movement and association. New Orwellian-sounding government organisations are being launched to target speech and behaviour online and off. There will be the Extremism Analysis Unit which will exchange data on "extremists" with other governments. The Disclosure and Barring Service will be set up to help employers bar "extremists" and this will include not only convictions but civil orders. The new Extremism Community Trigger will oblige police to take action possibly issuing orders restricting movement. The new National Citizen Service will allow diligent, publicly-minded teenagers to train up in British values — and sniff out extremism.

The Counter Extremism strategy document was nominally inspired by the upsurge of Muslim militancy from the "Trojan Horse" Islamic takeover of state schools to the fear of returning Jihadists, but somewhere along the line it seems to have been decided that it is the threat of White violence that also needs to be talked up.

It hardly needs to be said that there is no equivalence at all. No Whites have ever carried out suicide bomb attacks on underground railway stations or airports nor have they hacked servicemen to death on the streets, nor do their menfolk engage in ethnically-motivated mass rapes against vulnerable female children.

The authors of this document have only been able to dredge up two examples of "White" violence in the UK. The only fatal one was in 2013 by a Ukrainian who turns out to have been an immigrant who had been in the country for three days.

Nevertheless it is in the interests of the government, and the organised Jewish community in particular, to pretend that this non-existent threat is real. The Jewish community goes to great lengths to obscure the fact that the overwhelming majority of so-called "antisemitic incidents" are by Muslims. For them, the smearing of Whites as potentially violent, overrides all other considerations.

The hidden ethnic agendas at play in this document are revealed in the first few pages. The first is the re-statement and strengthening of the special protections from free speech that the Jewish community enjoys and the second is the heightened need to demonize the White community as congenitally a source of ethnic hatred in British society.

Helpfully that allows us to pinpoint the first big fat lie of omission that sits there wriggling in clear sight on page 12 when it names the Community Security Trust as a trusted source of anti-Semitism statistics. The CST has already boasted of its behind-the-scenes role in the drawing up of this document.

Readers of TOO have come across this shady vigilante organisation before. It is chaired by convicted criminal Gerald Ronson and was a favourite cause of the now late former president of the Board of Jewish Deputies, Greville Janner, before he was beset by his final legal difficulties.

The document then lists the TellMama organisation as a source of its figures on Islamophobic incidents. This organisation — Mama stands for 'Measuring Anti-Muslim Attacks' — styles itself as Britain's foremost anti-Muslim hate organisation and has received hundreds of thousands of pounds from the government to "monitor and combat hate crimes" against Muslims.

But what is nowhere revealed here is that the CST effectively took over TellMama in an attempt to corner the ethnic victimhood market. Britain's foremost Islamophobia organisation is Jewish-run! Indeed the former chief executive of CST took over much the same function with TellMama and at a meeting with government ministers, insisted that anti-Muslim attacks have the same status as anti-Semitic attacks in being logged separately by police.

The Home Secretary has now duly complied. And now anti-Muslim allegations are to join anti-Semitism incidents in being the only hate crime categories nationally recorded by British police. And are anti-White hate crimes such as the murders of Alan Cartwright and Lee Rigby to be separately logged? Not at all, for in the hierarchy of group interests, Whites in Britain do not exist.

And that is a striking feature of this document. The total absence of the thought that the White, indigenous people of these islands have any right to any legitimate form of group self-expression. The word "neo-Nazi" appears sixteen times as a proxy for White advocacy while the word White appears only in negative connotations.

It is the assault on internet free speech that is the most sinister and serious aspect of the coming clampdown. As an example of unacceptable content the report mentions one YouTube video which features an unidentified "extreme right-wing speaker" who argues that Jews were behind a "a conspiracy to alter the ethnic make-up of Britain. A conspiracy committing genocide against the White people. A conspiracy to exterminate the White people."

Just as in Germany last month when Angela Merkel demanded that Mark Zuckerburg shut down Facebook protests over Germany's mass influx of Syrian refugees, so a repeat push is taking place in Britain.

The document reveals that government and internet industry co-operation has increased sharply from 2010. "Removals at the request of the police have increased from around 60 items a month in 2010, when the unit responsible was first established, to over 4,000 a month in 2015, taking the total to 110,000 pieces of propaganda removed."

The document promises a further clamp down on free speech. It says the government will "work with social media and communications providers to ensure extremists do not have open access to their platforms."

Money is also going to be pumped into training an army of sock puppets who will patrol the online space, or as the documents puts it, will "empower internet users to report extremist content" and encourage "a wide range of civil society groups to help them build and maintain a compelling online presence," So as social entrepreneurs have, no doubt, not been slow to notice, the push against free speech is to be hugely incentivised.

On every front the screw on the internet is being tightened. More effective filtering technology is being developed, industry terms and conditions are being strengthened. "to ensure fewer pieces of extremist material appear online, and that any such material is taken down quickly."

And there is more to come. As the Prime Minister Cameron said earlier this year:
"We need to put out of action the key extremist influencers who are careful to operate just inside the law, but who clearly detest British society and everything we stand for. … we are going to introduce new narrowly targeted powers to enable us to deal with these facilitators and cult leaders, and stop them peddling their hatred".

It is not as if the British government have not been busy this year already. In February the Government introduced the new statutory Prevent duty, so that all local authorities, schools, universities and colleges and other public bodies must inform the police of any 'extremist' activity they come across. Item #38 of the document states:

"We must go further. We must counter the ideology of non-violent and violent extremists alike. We must continue our efforts to tackle neo-Nazi as well as Islamist extremism and respond better to the growing problems of hate crime in our communities."

Of particular worry, apparently, is the forum Stormfront and its popularity in Britain.

"Neo-Nazi and extreme right-wing groups have also proved adept at using the internet and social media to spread their ideology and seek recruits. For example, Stormfront is often described as the first website dedicated to racial hatred, providing an online forum for the discussion of white nationalism and white supremacy. Whilst based in the US, Stormfront's UK sub-forum is larger than that in any other region, with close to one million posts."

And it looks as though that even before this document was published, the clampdown had started. Last week Jez Turner, the organiser of the nationalist London Forum reported to a police station where, in the company of his solicitor, he was interviewed over his participation in the anti-Shomrim demonstration of several months ago. The police operation investigating this demonstration is so large it has been given the name of "Operation Saurus" and the police officers openly admitted that it was being carried out at the behest of the Jewish CST group. A report is being submitted to prosecutors before it is decided whether he will be charged or not.

And 22-year-old non-violent nationalist Joshua Bonehill is spending his fifth month behind bars. He was initially detained in June over alleged "racial incitement" Tweets before an anti-Shomrim protest. His trial on racial incitement charges is due to take place on December 14.

The mask of liberal democracy is slipping away. As anger rises over mass immigration to the West, so the authorities will be resorting to ever more desperate methods to stifle dissent. The greatest consciousness-raising resource of the last twenty years may be lost to us.

We need to be thinking hard about an awful possibility — a future without the internet and without outlets like the Occidental Observer. We desperately need to be looking at other ways of linking up with each other and if this pushes us away from our keyboards and out onto the streets it may be no bad thing.

Editors Comment: 'Social Media'

It is the considered opinion of your Editor that so-called 'social media' in all its forms be avoided like the plague! Most especially forums such as Stormfront. They are monitored by the enemy and in many cases set up by the enemy. We survived before the mobile phone, Facebook, Twitter and the Lord knows what forms of technological slavery leading to addiction. Ten years since I threw my last television in the bin. One of my better decisions.
Candour* people must get away from the screens and take a more significant leadership role on the streets. *CT.

FORWARD THE EXTREMISTS

By A. K. Chesterton MC

This lead article originally appeared in the February 1970 issue of Candour. It is timely. The political creeps who run the show on behalf of the financial puppet-masters are pushing through new anti-us laws. The most obvious chutzpah is that these specimens have claimed it is about protecting "Britishness" as if they can define something absolutely alien to them.

Every winter I am ordered abroad by my doctor and as I have many friends in South Africa it is there that I spend my time until returning to England in the Spring. Invariably I meet Britons who reside in the Cape and who, save up money to go back on holiday, which they do with a sense of great expectation. During recent years those I have met on their return, almost without exception, have spoken of their experiences with a look of sadness, mixed with consternation, on their faces.

"Things are very different now," they say, "It might almost be a foreign country. We shall never be tempted to go their again. We had thought of sending our boys to school in England - in fact that had been our idea from the time of their birth - but after our recent visit nothing would induce us to do so."

Seizing on the word 'foreign'. I make some remark about coloured immigrants. Those visitors who traveled about the country or sauntered around inner London in the evening or saw the schools disgorging their pupils at the end of the day became well aware of the problem - they could scarcely have failed to do so.

But, they told me, it was not that problem which caused them the greatest problem?

"It's the English themselves, " came the reply. (I do not think the Scots, Welsh and Northern Irish were intended to be excluded from the indictment.) "Whatever can have happened to them? They were once a wonderful people. Now they give every appearance of being a defeated people, a shambling people, a people without the guts to resist being pushed around from morning to night."

HIPPIES TOLERATED

I make some reference to the hippies and am told: "No, it's not the hippies we are talking about, but the people who tolerate the hippies and the other abortions who throng the streets. The people, moreover, who allow the most preposterous things to be seen and said on television. Such things would be impossible if the British people retained their pride in themselves and their nation."

It will be correctly surmised that I have here summarised in my own words the gist of many conversations, but I do not think any will be found to challenge the overall accuracy of what has been written. That such impressions should be formed makes the heart heavy.

The abiding impression, let there be no doubt of it, is of deep-rooted national decadence and nothing one can say in any way mitigates it.

One such visitor, recently returned, expressed himself vehemently about the rabble which endeavoured to wreck the Springbok Rugby tour. I agreed, but pointed out that the spectators in the stand gave the Boks an uproarious and most sporting welcome.

"Yes," he said. "That is the hell of it. If the people on the inside were the same as the morons yelling on the outside, there would be no Rugby matches and the whole country could be written off as a sink of degeneracy. But the fact that you have a large number of big-hearted sportsmen who would be a credit to any nation, and perhaps the best police force in the world, makes one fume that they should apparently be impotent to prevent the image of Great Britain being projected to the world as that of the hippie mob, and not as that of the decent elements - elements who should be able to dominate the national scene. Why don't they?"

That is a question I shall endeavour to answer.

SEEN FROM AFAR

First, however, let me say that the vision of Britain brought back by disillusioned visitors is one that tends to be uppermost in my own mind as I picture the country from a distance of six thousand miles. When working at home I find myself tackling one absurdity or one act of treachery as it arises and sometimes losing sight of the wood for the trees. In other words, I become immersed in the daily round and habituated to the sort of problem each day is likely to bring. Out here, however, I begin to see the picture in its totality and to my sense of humiliation and anger is added a feeling of something very much akin to incredulity.

Can it be true - or simply a horrific nightmare - that the posturing dwarfs elected by a brain-washed public have encouraged the entry into our small islands of people of totally disparate racial stock, and the enacted legislation designed to make criminals of those Britons who, having a preference for sharing their homeland with men and women of their own British breed, resist all ideas of racial integration?

It is possible that those who recoil in horror and disgust from the thought of such integration see no relation between the creatures who try to enforce the race-mixing and their own election of them to Parliament.

On a more personal level, is it possible that a creature like the Bishop of Stepney (Trevor Huddleston, you may remember) really said that he welcomed with all his heart the entry of large numbers of Blacks whose virility would reanimate our effette British blood and give it fresh vigour? To the European, conscious of his racial identity, and to the African, conscious of his, such teaching was poisonous and foul, and Huddleston, who must have some knowledge of the pitiable world of the half-caste, sinned against both God and man in propagating a doctrine. Who was the irreverent clown trying to please?

ABSURD ALTERNATIVE

Now to try to answer the question as to why the decent elements in Britain do not drive the unwashed rabble from the British scene. The answer is that they are as brain-washed as those whom they should oust from public view. They are convinced that Wilson as Prime Minister is cheap joke and that the Labour Government is thoroughly anti-British, with neither of which propositions will I quarrel, but the poor saps believe that all will be made well by putting Edward Heath and a Conservative Government in their place, which is an absurdity.

Well over sixty years ago Hilaire Belloc and my cousin, Cecil Chesterton, exposed the Party game as a sham-fight, and this it has remained - with both sides subservient to the Lords of Finance. If the Labour Party has anything to commend it, it is the fact that it does not pretend to be patriotic, whereas Conservatives, singing Land of Hope and Glory, have sold British interests down pretty well every river in the world.

That part of the Conservative Party which arouses the most scorn in me is the part which claims to be the Right Wing. Most of it belongs in the Monday Club, which sometimes ventures, ever so mildly and with all the tact in the world, to differ from the official leadership on such questions as Rhodesia. The chief concern of its members is that their lily-white fingers should never be spotted by any taint of extremism, which to them is the ultimate disaster, just as respectability is the sine qua non of their political being. That is why I despise them.

There is, however, another movement which has taken over the fight - a movement of dedicated extremists. They alone inspire hope.

Extremism does not mean violence, which is the political weapon of the ape. What it does mean is the giving of the whole of oneself and all the time and treasure one can afford, and more than one can afford, to the cause - for us the greatest of earthly causes, which is to rescue the once great British nation from the muddy Stygian depths in which she flounders. Whoever thinks that this task can be undertaken without extreme activity, without getting mud bespattered on hands and cuffs and without being called many nasty names, is a weakling, a political flaneur whose only service is to keep a hundred miles away from the battlefield.

Forward the Extremists!

Let those who really mean business get down to the job in hand and never mind the smears.
The personal reward is nil.
The national award will be superb

League of Empire Loyalists supporters demonstrate in 1956 during the Suez fiasco.

The LEL and Candour were the premier forces for good in the British post war world and they were the most effective tools used to spread the truth and to awaken our people. Candour was a magazine that became very influential – read and discussed in the highest circles, the very highest circles.

There is a lot we can learn from Candour and the LEL, and to do so we can't start at a better place than the short and snappy book, crammed as it is with photographs, begun by Hugh McNeile and finished after his death by Rob Black and titled "The History of the League of Empire Loyalists and Candour". It is unusual for such a book and most welcome that it is written by our own side.

Candour was established a year before the League of Empire Loyalists and rose as a weekly magazine, phoenix-like, in 1953 out of the ashes of Truth a magazine which AK Chesterton worked on until he left in disgust after it was bought out and had its editorial policy toned down. In AK's words it was "changed overnight from a journal of protest to a journal of acquiescence." AK had gained considerable editorial and writing experience, both in the BUF before the war and after it, in writing, (among other things), a number of plays, editing London Tidings, (a magazine formerly edited by Douglas Reed), regularly contributing both to The Duke of Bedford's monthly magazine The People's Post and The Journal of the Royal United Services Institution, and in being literary advisor and personal journalist to Lord Beaverbrook and his set of titles, which included The Daily Express, the Sunday Express and the Evening Standard.

The first consequence of Candour's launch was Lord Beaverbrook informing AK that he would not have his contract renewed. He was though allowed to work out the remainder of his contract. AK was a great lover of the theatre and must have gone for consolation to the Old Vic to see Shakespeare's 'King John'. There he must have been greatly and rightly impressed by the actor who played the illegitimate son of Richard I, who once knighted by King John is henceforth known as 'Sir Richard Plantagenet', but formerly is known as Philip Faulconbridge; for while working off the remainder of his contract he signed all his articles with the nom de plume Philip Faulconbridge. The young actor was Richard Burton.

Candour's aim was to be a clarion call to reinvigorate British patriotic forces with incisive, inspirational, hard-hitting articles and to support all bodies that stood unreservedly for Britain's national sovereignty and world power as friends and allies. As such it became something of the intellectual magazine for a whole host of Nationalist parties and patriotic groups, who for various reasons weren't able to sustain their own magazine – Candour today in 2015 fulfils much the same function. Later as these groups grew and were able to set up their own magazines, Candour became the magazine that the editors of these magazines read.

Contributors to Candour included such luminaries as Otto Strasser, Auberon Waugh, AN Field, Colin Brookes and his son Austen Brooks, Derek Tozer, Aidan Mackey, Noel Stock, Cecile von Goetz and Mark Ellen – but the mainstay was AK Chesterton himself.

In response to the high quality articles, subscriptions and money came in from all over the English speaking world and supporters began to clamour for ways in which they could help the cause that Candour so ably espoused. After all, it is not enough to say the right thing, to write the right thing – the right thing must also be done.

AK Chesterton Forms the LEL

On 13th April 1954 AK launched 'The League of Empire Loyalists', which was intended to be a localised grass roots, leaderless resistance type of pressure group. Rather like Franz Liszt's musical composition La Campanella, it would start with a few scattered musical raindrops and then slowly swell into a crescendo storm that would put a brake on existing political parties implementing policies of decline, eventually forcing them to adopt policies favourable to national and imperial survival, and to "raise such a hornet's nest under any public man who dared to speak or act against British interests as to put him in fear of his political career." One of its longer term goals was to create the suitable conditions under which a successful Nationalist party could emerge.

Its four stated aims were: the maintenance, (and where necessary), the recovery of the sovereign independence of the British peoples throughout the world; the strengthening of the spiritual and material bonds between them; the conscientious development of the British Empire under British direction and local British leadership; and, upon which all the other aims depended, to create 'the resurgence at home and abroad of the British spirit'.

It was designed to be a movement of exposure and protest, chiefly concerned in building up an informed body of thinking, articulate, politically active leadership fired by a missionary zeal. It was therefore elitist and aimed at recruiting and attracting the brightest, the boldest and the best - a case of 'recruit the best, attract the rest'. It also aimed to create leaders worthy of leading the British people. The British people after all wanted none of the changes the so-called British Establishment were forcing on them, but they didn't have the wherewithal, in short the necessary leaders, to effectively oppose what the Establishment was doing, let alone eventually replace it with a truly British Establishment that really cared about the British people. Doing this has always been the function of Nationalism. Anyone who still believes that the Establishments that currently rule the white world actually cares about the people over which they rule has to ask himself why those very same Establishments are so busy replacing the people over which they rule with non-whites?

With a full time paid organiser – Leslie Greene, a cousin of the novelist Graham Greene - and a HQ at 11 Palace Chambers, Bridge Street, Parliament Square opposite the Houses of Parliament, (which it kept until 1967 when the League was merged with other patriotic groups into the National Front), the League of Empire Loyalists, combined with the weekly magazine Candour, (which as you are reading this, you can see that it was indeed a force to be reckoned with).

The LEL Set the Standard

Indeed with its well organised intelligent and witty demonstrations, (remember this was an age that was only just beginning to be influenced by television and the dumbing down attendant with it), it hit the headlines again and again. In an age when journalism was becoming lazy and when the gentlemen of the press found it hard to even summon up enough energy to cover demonstrations by groups that their paymasters supported it is a wonder that the LEL/Candour got as much coverage as they did.

League members heckled meetings, many of them Conservative meetings, with polite, thought provoking questions, sometimes using bells, claxons and loud speakers to drive home the point. They cleverly altered election posters of the Lib-Lab-Con parties, (a MacMillan election poster 'Leading Britain to prosperity' had the prosperity blanked out and the word 'Destruction' put there in its place). They indulged in humorous graffiti, (painting the Colonial Office with the words "Mau Mau HQ''), stole UN flags during UN Day ceremonies, sneaked into the world council of churches annual meeting dressed up as members of the clergy and created chaos by condemning Archbishop Markarios, and even dressed up as witch doctors to demand the right for negroes to rule over whites and for cannibalism to be legalised. They heckled CND marchers from LEL loud speaker vans and became dab hands at emptying sack of flower and soot on the heads of left wing marchers from the top decks of passing London busses. They took a huge wooden spoon to Downing Street so that when the Prime Minister supped with the Russian tyrants Bulganin and Kruschev, who were on an official visit, he could use a long spoon. They indulged in the occasional egg throwing, and in response to the Suez crisis paraded a limp effigy of Anthony Eden carrying the placard 'Please give Eden a backbone for Christmas'.

A Slap for a Cad

Perhaps most controversially the LEL introduced 'the slap in the face for a cad' to the political demo repertoire. In August 1957 the newspaper owner and anti-apartheid campaigner John Grigg, otherwise known as Lord Altrincham, wrote an article in which he called the Queen a 'priggish schoolgirl' and criticised her and her court for being 'too British'. The article was a precursor of things to come, but at the time caused uproar ,''how dare he pit his infinitely tiny and temporary mind against the accumulated experience of centuries''. One afternoon as Lord Altrincham was leaving Television House after giving an interview defending his article, the diminutive Phil Burbidge stepped up to him and in the full glare of the television cameras slapped him in the face saying "Take that from the League of Empire Loyalists''. Later explaining his action to the press he stated ''I felt it was up to a decent Briton to show resentment''. The whole thing was filmed, and broadcast to the world, creating shivers of satisfaction from decent people right across the globe.

The Conservative Party hierarchy was infuriated by the antics of the LEL and the annual Conservative Party conference became a key battleground of wits - the Party trying every trick to keep LEL hecklers out and the LEL using every ruse and the help of sympathisers within the party to get themselves in. The Conservative Party increasingly descended to rough house tactics to quickly silence and eject the LEL hecklers as soon as they revealed themselves - tales abound of swarthy Whitechapel thugs, specially brought in and hired for the purpose, throwing pearl necklaced dowagers over brick walls.

Even enemies of the LEL/Candour had to admire the LEL's bravery, energy and inventiveness and some elements of the traditional left had a grudging regard for their exposure of the Conservative Party's hypocrisy.

Perhaps the most daring exploit was the when a LEL pirate broadcasting station interrupted the weather forecast after the BBC 6 o'clock news with a witty statement relating to the ongoing NATO conference in Paris - ''An anti-British cyclone has moved from Paris to envelop the Western World and cause deep depression in the United Kingdom. Ensure fair weather by joining the League of Empire Loyalists.'' The authorities never found the transmitter.

Candour never shied away from controversy and was frequently involved in libel actions – all of which it won - the payouts going straight into the coffers of the LEL and Candour to further the cause.

The LEL sent questionnaires to sitting and prospective MPs as a way of establishing their views on certain important issues. Some of the worst offenders found themselves fighting their next parliamentary election against a LEL candidate – this was useful as a way of highlighting the MP's views, publicising the LEL and of helping to set up new LEL branches.

All in all the LEL activists made sure they went about their business in a stylish, chivalrous, swashbuckling, Errol Flynn, way and they had a lot of fun in doing so! The actual number of activists who regularly participated in these demos was actually quite small, but the roll of honour included some of those who went on to become Nationalist leaders for the next few decades - Colin Jordan, John Tyndall, Bill Baillie and Martin Webster.

Where was the Support?

Why there were not more branches of the LEL and more activists willing to get involved is an interesting question and one with which patriots continually ask themselves about the patriotic cause in general. It is a question worthy of an answer and deserving a digression.

It is probably due to a pot pourri of reasons.

Although we Britons did not suffer the deliberate and obvious killing off of our leadership genes in the way those of Russia and Eastern Europe did, (Katyn, Holodomor, the Gulags etc), many of our best were wiped out fighting for the British (Rothschild) Empire in questionable conflicts such as the Boer War and in the genocide of the bravest and best in the trenches that was the First World War. The later dysgenic effect of the combination of feminism, abortion, contraception, divorce and fashion whereby our women folk have been persuaded to abandon home making and child rearing and instead turn themselves into wage slaves toiling in meaningless jobs until the biological clock kicks in and they find to their horror they've left it too late, have been drastic and amount to a genocide by stealth.

Any children that are born, most of them as an only child or into pitifully small families, and usually dysfunctional, if not broken families at that, are similarly abandoned and lead lonely lives sitting in front of televisions or cared for by strangers.

The ideal which should be to encourage the production of the best genes and get the best out of them, is ignored as the modern world does the exact opposite by discouraging the production of the best genes and proceeding to get the worst out of them.

The myth of equality, which has led to an extreme individualism and selfishness, has made paternalism a dirty word and destroyed the idea of noblesse oblige. After all if everyone is the same or has the potential to be the same then there is no reason for those of higher ability to take on the responsibility of looking after those of lesser ability, or of organising and leading society, or of becoming political activists.

If we are all equal then all that remains is to condemn Daily Mail style, those who don't have the necessary talents and qualities to become yet more managers, (our rulers seem to expect the whole population to become managers – of what they never divulge), or who are unable to resist the temptations of alcohol, drugs, pornography, gambling, loan sharks or living off the welfare state. An unskilled worker in Britain today is paid such a paltry wage due to having to compete with tides of imported third-world unskilled labour, that he would have to earn the equivalent of a Chartered Accountant's salary to make it worth his while getting out of the benefits trap. As for acquiring a trade or skill and therefore becoming a skilled worker this is now next to impossible as employers no longer bother to train staff or take on apprentices – they just import all the skilled workers they require from abroad.

I was once told in hushed tones by a leading Social Housing Executive in London that if it wasn't for the provision of benefit payments and council housing, then immigration combined with oppressive slum landlords of the Peter Rachman-Rachmanism-Kray twin racketeering renting type, would have led long ago to xenophobic workplace riots and pogroms, and most probably a government that would have made the British Movement seem like a bunch of moderates. It's a sobering thought.

Be that as it may the welfare state with its benefit payments and council housing salves the conscience of the middle class, while at the same time they condemn it. More importantly and crucially it also insulates our Race from reality. The prevailing attitude in society today seems to be "It's a case of dog eat dog in this world and I'm alright Jack and so would you be if you got your act together." Forgetting of course that it isn't dog eat dog in this world at all, it is a case of 'pack of dogs eat pack of dogs', ie tribe against tribe, race against race, and any tribe or race that acts in the stupid shallow individualist 'dog eat dog way' outlined above will be very soon destroyed by a pack of dogs that still has the common sense to act as a pack.

Oswald Mosley once said that the middle classes would never bestir themselves to real political action while they were comfortable. I would amend that to say that it seems to be so for all the classes. Nevertheless over the course of its 13 years existence the LEL grew to boast some very influential members indeed including, (in no particular order), the Right Revd McGrath Bishop of Cardiff, Lady Freeman (author of 'The Traditionalist's Anthology'), Lt Col David Fraser-Harris, Major General Hilton (author of 'Imperial Obituary'), Martin Burdett-Coutts, (of the famous banking family), George Drummond, (the millionaire banker and head of Drummond's branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland), the Earls of Buchan and Norbury, General Sir Hubert Gough, Major-General PJ Mackesey, Lt Col Jock Creagh- Scott, Air Commodore Graham Oddie, Wing Commander Leonard Young (author of 'Deadlier than the H Bomb'), Field Marshal Lord Ironside of Archangel and of Ironside, (a former Chief of the Imperial General Staff and Commander in Chief Home Forces), Lt Col TB Butt, Lt General Sir Balfour Hutchinson and Sir Richard Palmer, (the Governor and Commander in Chief of Cyprus). It even had a couple of sitting Conservative councillors in Preston and Leicester.

The range of those who publically supported the LEL and Candour was even wider and included Admiral Sir Barry Domville, George Young, (former deputy director of MI6), the ex- pat millionaire RK Jeffrey, several MPs, the leader of Rhodesia – Ian Smith, and JRR Tolkien. The scope of people who discretely or secretly supported the LEL and Candour can only be guessed at. In the colonies and dominions, where the white inhabitants lived 'closer to ruthless reality, red in tooth and claw', support was far more open and enthusiastic and tours by AK Chesterton and colleagues were everywhere met with halls packed out with exhuberant audiences. (Listen to the CD of AK in Rhodesia debating with Colonel Jock Sterling of the Bernard Baruch funded multi-racial Capricorn Africa Society, available from the AKC Trust).

The Spy Who Loved Me Ian Fleming

The LEL even found its way into fiction - a 17 year old model and LEL member Judy Moyens was rumoured to be the inspiration for LEL sympathiser Ian Fleming's The Spy Who Loved Me. Fleming the author of the James Bond thrillers wrote;

"I was lucky the job I had been trying for came up. It was through the usual friend-of-a-friend, and it was on the Chelsea Clarion, a glorified parish magazine that had gone in for small ads and had established itself as a kind of marketplace for people looking for flats and rooms and servants in the southwest part of London. It had added some editorial pages that dealt only with local problems – the hideous new lamp posts, infrequent buses on the Number 11 route, and the theft of milk bottles – things that really affected the local housewives, and it ran a whole page of local gossip, mostly "Chelsea", that "everybody'' came to read and that somehow managed to dodge libel actions. It also had a hard-hitting editorial on Empire Loyalist lines that exactly suited the politics of the neighbourhood…"

Candour also had a much more profound effect on the British Nationalist Movement – invigorating it with ideas and new talent. The fact that the nitrate millionaire RK Jeffery was willing to leave all he possessed to AK Chesterton speaks volumes, and what might have been if this last will and testament had not been tampered with shortly before his death, (the saga of which is detailed in this book), is anybody's guess.

Massive LEL Legacy

In short the LEL and Candour had a profound influence on waking up the British people to the fact that something was very rotten in the state of Britain, and that the Conservative Party was not part of the solution, but rather actually part of the problem. A couple of examples will demonstrate the scope of the LEL and Candours' impact.

On a cold and chilly morning, July 15th, 1963, shortly after he had left the LEL a youthful and idealistic Martin Webster tipped off a journalist in return for £400 that he was going to slap a man outside the London Hilton Hotel. That man was to be someone whom the British Government had formerly regarded as a terrorist - the visiting Kenyan head of state and Mau Mau leader, Jomo Kenyatta. This slapping in the face was of course was a tactic he had learnt with the LEL. When the moment came Kenyatta's African bodyguard drew his gun, but unlike Martin Webster, he hesitated and Kenyatta was knocked to the ground. "This man is responsible for the murder of our white brethren in Africa" shouted Martin Webster to the startled onlookers, bodyguards, police and press. The subsequent photos – appearing in every major newspaper worldwide, including the front page of the London Evening News with the caption "The Jostling pf Jomo" - raised a hearty cheer from white people everywhere. Webster spent 40 days in Brixton prison where he was given his own cell and the run of the prison library by sympathetic warders. The money obtained he promptly donated to John Tyndall for him to set up and print the first issue of the magazine Spearhead.

The National Front, whose first Chairman was AK Chesterton, owed much of its success in the 1960s and 1970s to people who had learnt their trade with the LEL and who had developed their ideology from reading Candour. Even now every year on Remembrance Day the National Front organise a Nationalist Parade of Remembrance to the Cenotaph in Whitehall to honour all the Britons throughout the world, including Rhodesia and South Africa, who have fallen in battle. There can be no more fitting tribute to the legacy of AK Chesterton.

"Let us join together with men and women of good heart and unwearied and unwarped judgement to form a phalanx which will shock the enemy and send him recoiling in dismay. If no such a stand is taken, let no man talk of the British future, because that future will have been betrayed – and betrayed above all by those of us who understand the nature of the Satanic forces arrayed against us, but who have failed to do the utmost in our power to ensure that they do not prevail".

AK Chesterton. 1966.

Conclusion

"It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory or defeat."

Theodore Roosevelt

AK Chesterton is gone but his legacy and Candour journal fights on. It fights on against the strange concoction of ideologies that rule over us - a mixture of Capitalism, Marxism, Liberalism and Zionism, a concoction that could be more accurately called 'Jewish Supremacism'. And it fights on against the regime itself, which could be described as a medley of oligarchy and plutocracy, but which could be more accurately labelled an 'Ashkenazocracy'. Whatever one chooses to name the system under which we sweat and slave, and under which we are slowly being exterminated - a Melmottian nightmare world beyond even Thackeray's worse predictions - it is clear now that we are living in evil times for our Race and that AK Chesterton "did his very best''.

Victory or failure in these matters is not judged in monetary terms, or even materialistic terms, but in the success in sowing seeds in the minds of men. Such seeds take a long time to bear fruit and we, even at this distance in time, are not best placed to judge. History will do that

Here is the story of a phase in our fight against Evil, when we were led by a good man. It is time we found more such good men, found them or forged them and the only real way to forge them is in the fiery furnace of fighting the good fight.

All it takes for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing.

It is time to fight Evil!

If it is Truth you want it's Candour you need!

Rosine de Bounevialle 1916 - 1999 100th Anniversary 2016

Miss. Rosine Maria de Bounevialle, born 19 June 1916, died on Christmas Eve 1999. Next year we will honour this little lioness of a lady.

A collection of Rosine's essays, ABC of Politics, which originally appeared in Candour will be printed in book form for the first time including a biography of Miss. De B. and previously unpublished photographs.

This remarkably brave lady picked up the sword of Candour that others refused to wield following the death of our founder AK Chesterton in 1973. Many, I can state as did Rosine, who were involved with the League of Empire Loyalists or subscribers to Candour were in awe of the man AK Chesterton yet perhaps did not fully comprehend how revolutionary his message was. He must have been an overwhelming and magnetic personality The fact is that those who AK expected to continue Candour quickly found they had more pressing business and became as Scotch Mist.

Rosine de Bounevialle 1961

With no experience of printing or publishing Rosine had to learn the business from scratch. Doris Chesterton, AK's widow, passed on all the subscription lists, files and correspondence to Rosine and the lady set to work. What a fantastic job she did. There was much more to Rosine than editing and publishing Candour on a regular monthly basis (something your present Editor would greatly like to emulate!) and I believe her efforts and sacrifices have thus far gone very largely unappreciated by many and especially by some of those to whom she opened her doors and gave sanctuary to when they were supposedly running for their lives in the very early 1980s..

Another story for another day...

There is hope for our future. It is going to be a hard slog. It will seem impossibly tough at times but we are of the same stock of those who built the greatest Empire of all time. Education and courage must be our foundation. We can and will win for the sake of our little ones.

BRITONS FOREVER!

The League of Empire Loyalists and Myself

By Dennis Whiting
Denniswhiting83@gmail.com

I wish to acknowledge here my great appreciation to Mr. Whiting for the following new article. Of course the ranks of former members of the LEL are dwindling and it is the duty of Candour to gather their memories while we can. So if you were one of that band of splendid brothers and sisters or have information, memories, literature or best of all photographs or any other memorabilia from those days please contact us here at BM Candour, London, WC1N 3XX, or at www.candour.org.uk
Colin Todd.

I was born in 1933. When I was about 15 years old I came under the spell of G.K. Chesterton and started to devour his novels, poems and other writings. After a year or two I discovered there was a successor to his magazine, G.K.s Weekly. It was called The Defendant or The Distributist (the title varied). The editors were Aidan Mackey and Austen Brooks. They were my conduit to Candour, published by G.K. Chesterton's cousin, A.K. Chesterton. Thus, in about 1954, I became a Candour subscriber and a member of the League of Empire Loyalists.

Although I was somewhat taken aback by A.K.'s pugnacious and angry tone, I gradually came round to his point of view. Not so my sister. (At that time we were Oxford undergraduates living at home in the vacations.) She looked at some Candours and wrote a heated and indignant letter to A.K. To which he probably replied in a polite and gentle way. I guess this because my sister was a trifle embarrassed and refused to show me the correspondence. Sadly in my whole life I have never managed to convert any member of my family circle to the Nationalist viewpoint. Similarly with my professional colleagues in the library world. On two separate occasions in those early days fellow librarian housemates perused my Candours and were quite shocked - both at their tone and tenor - and at the fact that someone so seemingly mild-mannered and reasonable as myself was prepared to give such vile stuff houseroom.

For a year or two in the early 1960's, when I was the Periodicals Librarian at Kings College in in the University of Aberdeen I ventured to leave copies of Candour in the racks provided for items of occasional interest. A politics lecturer (himself of East European origin I believe) remarked to me that while he found the articles too strong and harsh against particular individuals, they had a certain pungency and interest.

I am ashamed to admit that I took no part in the activities - the stunts and the heckling, etc -described in the recent book on the LEL by McNeile and Black. In fact I received an adverse impression of one such intervention, when - as a simple unsuspecting member of the audience - I attended a meeting in Oxford Town Hall: it must have been about the time of the Suez crisis. There was a sudden outburst of stentorian shouting of which I could make no sense and which I afterwards given to understand was some LEL heckling. But what the whole thing was about I have long forgotten.

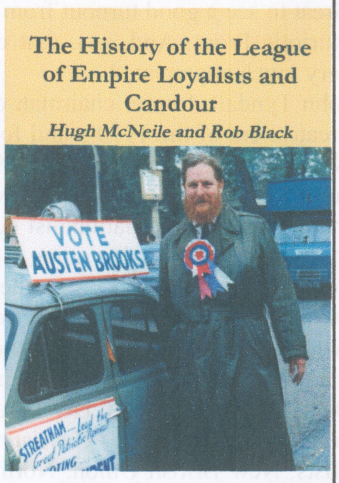
I remember the crisis or fiasco of the RK Jeffery will in 1961. I responded to the appeal for funds to send Aidan Mackey to Chile with a cheque for £18, which, pro rata, must have been the most generous political donation of my life, since it represented virtually all my accumulated savings at that period. Later on in the 1960's I met Austen Brooks and Aidan Mackey in the LEL offices on Westminster Bridge. I can remember them assuring me that the whip-hand held over the world by the international financiers was very real and very serious.

In the 1960's I attended at least one League AGM. and the social that followed. I don't know whether Miss. Rosine de Bouneviialle was present but the only occasion I can remember meeting her was much later on when I and my wife were the sole attendees at a study weekend she held in Forest House in 1986. The AGM chaired by A.K. Chesterton that I particularly remember must have been one of the early NF ones - probably 1968. There had been a quarrel between A.K. and Andrew Fountaine and Fountaine was thrown out of the meeting, protesting loudly!*

*Editors note. Every organisation has an awkward squad. What I call the F Troop for reasons that to the more savvy will not need any more explanation.

The History of the League of Empire Loyalists and Candour

By Hugh Mc Neile and Rob Black



In the twelve years of its existence the League of Empire Loyalists became almost a national institution. Expounding a dynamic creed of patriotism, it attracted a modest but worldwide following, and at its peak the LEL managed to force its way into the headlines of the world's press with demonstrations more original, courageous, inventive and attractive than those of any other organisation of the time - an achievement which has not been matched since. This book was originally produced to mark the 60th anniversary of the founding of the League of Empire Loyalists in 1954 (a year after the founding of this journal).

Information and Action: Candour & The A. K. Chesterton Trust On the Road Again!

10th John Tyndall Memorial Meeting Preston 10th October 2015

135 nationalists from a wide spectrum of parties and movements attended the John Tyndall Memorial Meeting in Preston, Lancashire on October 10th 2015. All nations of the United Kingdom were represented with speakers and audience members from England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, and we also welcomed visitors from the Irish Republic, Canada and the United States.

Great to see a good turnout from the North-East of the Northern Patriotic Front. And, yes, that cash donation to Candour was very much appreciated.

John Tyndall, former chairman of the National Front during its greatest era of the 1970's and founding chairman of the British National Party from 1982 to 1999, died ten years ago on 19th July 2005. The meeting opened with a minute's silence in memory of JT and nationalist comrades who have died during the past 12 months, including H&D subscribers Walter Carr (a veteran colleague of JT's in the NF and BNP) from the West Midlands, and Leslie Brannan from Basingstoke, Hampshire.

After a lunch break the audience had time to browse among many stalls from organisations including Heritage and Destiny, British Voice, British Democratic Party, British Movement, A.K. Chesterton Trust / Candour, Western Spring, Preston Loyalists, New British Union, Northern Patriotic Front, Church of the Creator, Telling Films, Counter-Currents / Arktos Press, Blood & Honour, Yorkshire Forum and Heretical Press and the Historical Review Press.

At the back of the hall and listening intently. Colin Todd under the Candour banner. Right. Paul Ballard of the Historical Review Press. www.hrp.co.uk

A special thank you to our Preston hosts for again providing an excellent venue. The buffet as always was super (and a special mention to the lady who packed me a bag of goodies to get me back to Hampshire which in one day is a bit of a hike). More thanks to the top notch security boys. Disciplined, smart and dignified. A credit to the Movement. Last and not least we all should remember to thank Mark Cotterill of the super Heritage & Destiny journal (www.heritageanddestiny.com) for his organisational abilities and refusing to be bullied by the Preston Constabulary or the pitiful masked pre-pubescent teens of the anti fascist silly-billys.

CANDOUR

Editorial

Before we make too many plans for the future we must become expert at surviving in an increasingly hostile enviroment.

A Stasi - Big Brother atmosphere has already been created. Self-censorship is in place. A fear of speaking one's mind in the shop or pub. Will your child repeat a 'politically incorrect' comment you made when watching the telly about the non-white invasion of Europe to one of their school mates who repeats it to a teacher?

Fear is the key to the tactics of our enemies. We must learn to adapt to changing circumstances without compromise!

Have a safe and warm Christmas and let's all come out fit and fighting for 2016!

A Joyful Christmas to all our Readers

National Front Remembrance Day March London 8th November 2015

National Front Flag Party London 8th November 2015

Mr. Richard Edmonds, of the National Front's speech at the end of the march:

"Friends. Today we pay tribute to those brave men and women who suffered and who gave their lives in the two world wars. We do not forget the bravery and the sacrifice of those men and women.

Those men and women who charged enemy machine-gun posts; those men who stormed the Normandy beaches; those men who flew their planes into dangerous skies; those men of the Royal Navy and the Merchant Marine who sailed their ships across dark and dangerous oceans.

We do not forget the bravery of those men who faced death on a thousand battlefields and whose names are engraved on war memorials from one end of the country to the other. Those men who marched away from every city, town and village, never to return.

Let me in particular pay tribute to those British soldiers brutally murdered by Jewish terrorists at the end of the Second World War; the hundred British military and civilian personnel mass murdered in Palestine in the name of 'Israel' when Zionist terrorists exploded a bomb at the headquarters of the British administration in Jerusalem. The two British Army Sergeants, Mervyn Paice and Clifford Martin, kidnapped, tortured and murdered by Jewish terrorists. Gunner Harold Yates, from Sheffield gunned down in cold blood by Zionist terrorists in disguise, wearing the stolen uniforms of British officers. British heroes. Gone but never forgotten.

Today, may we, their sons and daughters, their grandsons and grandaughters, never forget the Sacrifice of the Fallen never forget the Sacrifice of the Fallen of the two World Wars. May we who come after, draw strength from their patriotism and idealism. We know that those of our blood would turn in their graves if they could see what has become of our Britain.

Let us say it: Those men were betrayed. The party politicians, the TRAITOR politicians are continuing to destroy our country. Our proud cities, London, Birmingham, Newcastle, Manchester, Bradford, Leeds, Swansea, Cardiff, Edinburgh, Glasgow, turned into rape, riot and permanent crime zones where the native Britons are becoming a minority.

This is the modern fight. The fight against the betrayal of Britain committed by the party politicians. This is the fight that the National Front has fought for fifty years now. Friends, you are in good company when you join us. We fight for the White Man and Woman, for our families and for Britons worldwide. May the courage or those brave people whom we honour today inspire us now as we face the inner enemy.

The political traitors of the old gang at Westminster!"

Let us see more Candour people there in 2016!

London Forum 14th November 2015

A busy few weeks for your Editor culminated in another meeting and another AK Chesterton Trust stall. This time for an excellent meeting of the London Forum. The speakers included:

Karl Richter of the German NPD on - The Situation In Germany Today.

Robert Verreycken Flanders and the Flemish people facing genocide.

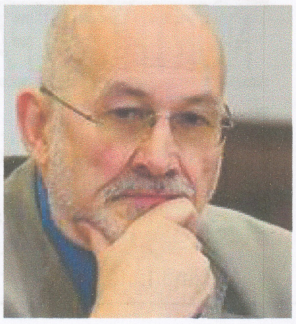
Daniel Carlsen the young (24 I think) leader of the Party of the Danes on - Denmark, a Nation and People Facing Extinction.

Not all gloom and doom. Believe me. The quality of the speakers and attendees is inspiring.

Videos of the speeches are available via our facebook page which is accessible direct via the front page of our website at www.candour.org.uk

The meeting raised exactly £1,000 towards the funds being raised world-wide for Horst Mahler our German comrade who has paid a massive cost for his, and our, principles and honour.

Horst Mahler



To find out more about Herr Horst Mahler and why so many groups and individuals world-wide are determined to raise as much cash as possible to aid him please search Metapedia or the internet in general.

His life and times, trials and tribulations are a remarkable story. From extreme left in the 1960's to nationalist hero and martyr in the 21st Century. More in next Candour...

"Always Bloody Something"

As Miss. Rosine de Bounvialle, my predecessor as Editor was fond of saying. Just when you think things are going to plan the domino effect starts. First the telephone starts playing up. Next the printers connected to the computer and then the computer. Result no internet, email, etc. That set this issues mail out back by a week. Got the technical problems partly sorted out Thursday night (the 17th Dec. after a week or so of confusion. A good job the revolution did not start then. Boudicca and myself would have missed it.

Hard Slog for the Cause

I am proud to say that we have been busy this year. This issue of Candour is intended to illustrate that there are still a good determined hardcore of men and women, young and old , who will not bend the knee to the enemies of our folk.

For the most part I see the same old faces, no offence intended to you old mugs, but it is encouraging to have met more new people at meetings this past year. I do know and appreciate how difficult it is to walk into a busy room and try and feel a part of what is happening. It is a lonely feeling to be in a crowd at times. I am very shy by nature. If you can get to a London Forum meeting, for example, look for the Candour banner and stall. Ask for Colin Todd and when they reply "Who" mention Candour and when they reply "What" ask for Jez Turner or Giovanni at the door to point the way.

I'll always try and take time to talk or introduce you to comrades. Understand that these can be busy occasions when we have to pack a lot into a short time.

Super response to our last issue. (861).

Let us together keep up the hard work. A big salute to our friends in the US and the Confederacy. An honest question. How do you define yourselves these days. Americans, Whites, Johnny Rebs, Rednecks, Confederates, Copperheads? I am in contact with Rob Rendell of the NAARG and that is a question I will ask him. We are trying to line up a series of interviews.

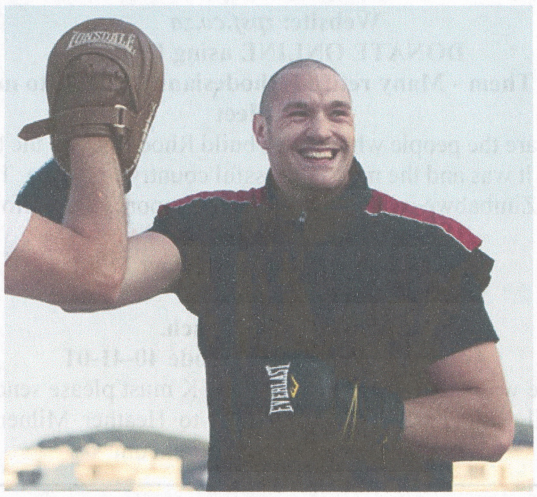
The Fight is on! Worldwide!

Tyson Fury
World Heavyweight Champion



The Fury of Tyson

With acknowledgements to the irishsavant.blogspot.co.uk

....make way for the libtards' worst nightmare. Ladies and gentlemen I present to you the newly-crowned World heavyweight Boxing Champion, Mr. Tyson Fury. (His real name, after Mike Tyson, and Fury is a common surname among Irish Travellers).

In an interview with the vile Daily Mail before winning a unanimous decision against Vladimir Klitschko, of the Ukraine, who had held the title(s) for eleven years Fury upset every media pimp and metrosexual wimp possible.

"There are only three things that need to be accomplished before the devil comes home. One of them is homosexuality being legal in countries, one of them is abortion and the other is paedophilia. Who would have thought in the 50s and 60s that those first two would be legalised?

When I say paedophiles could be made legal, it sounds crazy. But if I had said to you about the first two being made legal in the 50s, I would have been looked upon as a crazy man.

....People can say 'You are against abortions, you are against paedophilia, you are against homosexuality', but my faith and my culture is based on the Bible."

At this point every pervert in Britain put aside their perversions and, as one, launched hysterical attacks on the heretic. They were joined by every scrawny hunchbacked pencil-necked libtard out there, already coiled like rattlesnakes ready to strike at the first sign of Thought Crime. Tens of thousands signed an online petition to have him banned from the HeBeC Sports Personality of the Year Competition, which by the time you read this will have come and gone. Fury's reaction? "* them, I don't give a damn about that prize."

Predictably the next move was to have Fury prosecuted for HATE. The first complaint being made by an old queen who used to be a constable with the South Yorks police. (There are no charges pending to date) When you see the freak show alliance united in HATE against a white man who is big enough to speak TRUTH you see the face of the enemy truly EXPOSED! Who would have thought that a member of our 'travelling community' would rekindle my hopes for the White race? While we can let us revel in the fact that we have a White World Heavyweight Champion who beat a Zionist to win it! (By the way my winning bet on the fight paid for half the postage costs of this issue. Colin Todd.)

NEW! Land and Property Fund

One must always have a Plan B and a Plan C, etc. I do not wish to bore or depress you, the Candour people, with the pressure one can come under in this struggle.

To this end I have opened a new account in my name to avoid complications. I am also preparing a new pamphlet explaining clearly how you can help our efforts after your death by making clear provision in your will. This will be mailed with our next issue. (I have concrete evidence of at least one occasion where an executor, in that case a step-son who loathed his step-fathers beliefs as a LEL and NF member and Candour subscriber and who subverted a £10,000 legacy to Candour. He knew it would cost us as much or more in legal fees to fight a case and it was some years after the event that I discovered the fraud. For that is what it was.) We have to be realists. It is much more difficult for executors to pervert your wishes when they have to deal with me as an individual. Sad times I know. My own family disowned me half a lifetime ago because of my unbending beliefs. Rosine took me in like a stray and now I take in stray and much abused dogs. I survived. It is what I do.

Please make payments payable to Colin Todd and send to:

BM Candour, London, WC1N 3XX, England.

(If sending cash, home or overseas, please wrap in tin foil and send in a securely sealed envelope).

For those who are serious about large donations and making myself a beneficiary in their Will email me direct at :

akctrust@yahoo.co.uk and I will provide my home address and personal details.

We have a lot of work to do together on this vital project.

DONATIONS

A big thank you to all who have backed us in 2015. We have made some solid progress this year. This against the tide of nationalism in the British Isles which has been in constant ebb for some time. Candour like a rock or beacon is constant. Tended by hands coarsened by struggle in many ways.

We will never sell out to the State, Financial Interests or bullies.

Make all cheques or Postal Orders payable to:

The A.K. Chesterton Trust and send to;

BM Candour, London, WC1N 3 XX, England.

(Otherwise send cash in £'s, $'S or Euros in well sealed envelopes).
